

GIRL KILLED, 10 HURT IN AUTO CRASH

General Johnson Submits to "Suppressor" of Volatile Speeches

WASHINGTON — General Johnson, at times an alleged suppressor of the press, now has submitted to an official suppressor of himself.

He is James Cope, until recently a reporter for the Associated Press, and his job will be to try to muzzle the volatile ex-cavalry officer when he starts flying off the handle over some innocuous incident.

Friends of the General—and he still has a lot—say that Cope is an adviser he has needed for a long time. Some of Johnson's rhetorical "bulls" have come near blowing his own job out from under him.

Latest, the crusty blast about Soviet Russia and its alleged influence among the steel workers, not only caused extreme indignation in labor circles, but also some trepidation at the State Department.

For a high-ranking officer, especially one who is virtually a Cabinet member, to berate a friendly government as Johnson did Russia, has led to diplomatic apologies in the past. General Smedley Butler, stormy petrel of the Marine Corps, was threatened with court-martial for saying less about Premier Mussolini.

The Russian Embassy decided to ignore the incident, but Roosevelt couldn't. Particularly he could not ignore the resentment of the steel workers. That was why he lifted the steel labor dispute from Johnson's hands and gave it to Miss Perkins.

Cope, the new Johnson-suppressor, is an able hombre. But he will have his hands full. Johnson's blue-penciled and deleted. To no avail. Once on his feet, Johnson simply can't resist the temptation to bark globose vituperatives into the microphone.

If Cope can hold him, he'll be a superman.

New Deal Dogs

The White House has a new dog—"Pal," a battle-scarred bull pup belonging to Gus Genierich, the President's personal bodyguard.

Pal joins a long and famous list: "Laddie Boy, Rob Roy, Pat, Weegie, Megs, Major, Winks."

No social register has listed these names, yet their bearers have had freer access to the White House than Cabinet Members and diplomats.

Of them all, only Winks remains—in the flesh. Rob Roy is still in the White House in an oil painting. Enter by the lower doorway on the east side; the first painting is of Mrs. Coolidge with her collie, Rob Roy, done by Howard Chandler Christy.

The best known dog in Harding's time was Laddie Boy, a short, brown airedale. In Coolidge's time it was Rob Roy, who died while the President was in the White House. In Hoover's time, there were a Norwegian wolfhound, nicknamed Weegie by the children, a police dog, Pat, and two setters. It was Weegie who made the front pages by biting a Marine. Mr. Hoover, departing, took both Weegie and Pat to Palo Alto.

Of the New Deal dogs, Mrs. Roosevelt's Meggie (or Megs), a black Scottie, has been left with friends to be cared for in her "old age." She, too, was in the White House. But a mere Marine was a newswoman, May Craig.

Determined to outdo former records, Major, the President's police dog, also went for higher game, biting a Senator, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, and he, too, has been sent away. Until Pal arrived the other day, only Winks, the President's setter, remained.

Note:—There is no special custodian of the kennels today as neither Coolidge nor Hoover. During the Coolidge era as many as six dogs lived at the White House at one time. They came chiefly as gifts from persons who thought the President should have a dog, or another dog, or a different dog, and who sought a greater distinction.

STRIKING MEN IN UNION AREA CRY 'SLAVERY'

Appeal Sent to Labor
Chief in Washington
Seeking Help

CLASH IS FEARED

Special Deputies Ordered to Fields

KENTON, June 25.—An appeal for governmental intervention in the strike of 600 union farm laborers in the onion fields of the Scioto marshes was sent to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins at Washington today.

Charging that conditions of the striking workers "were worse than those of slaves before Civil War days," J. M. Rizer, organizer for the National Farm Laborers' union of which the strikers are members, sent a telegraphic appeal to Secretary Perkins. It said:

"Condition in Marion twp., Hardin-co., state of Ohio: People working for from five to 15 cents an hour. They are worse than the slaves before the Civil War."

CONDITION CITED

"Houses unfit to live in. Hardly any clothes, or food. No sewage system. They are on strike. Employers refuse to meet them. Children from eight years on up are working for 10 hours a day."

"Something has got to be done right away for those people. Send somebody to check conditions at once if possible."

Meanwhile, Sheriff Wilbur Mitchell was to select a force of 50 special deputy sheriffs for duty in the onion fields from a list of approximately 70 applicants. Many of the latter include ex-soldiers and members of the local post of the Ohio National Guard.

First patrols of the special deputies were expected to be sent into the fields shortly after noon, according to Mitchell. He said he had been advised that some owners of large farms planned to start cultivation today even in face of the walkout and he expressed fear that there might be minor clashes between pickets and men willing to work.

40 SQUARE MILES

The Scioto marshlands comprised a 40-square-mile area where the largest onion fields in the nation are located. There are approximately 17,000 acres of land under cultivation and the 100 large farms and the 75 smaller farms ship about 3,200 carloads of onions every harvest season.

Church Demands Movie Cleanup

Scene from the "Life of Vergie Winters"

Will Hays (Scene of a nudist movie, which was not shown in several states)

Boycott of motion pictures has been threatened by members of the Catholic faith unless the movie industry accedes to demands of the church that salacious and immoral films be cleaned up. A formal demand for the cleanup has been made at a meeting in Cincinnati of representatives of Will Hays, movie czar, and church officials, headed by Archbishop John T. McNicholas. As the church campaign waged, the Ohio Board of Censors banned the showing of the new movie, "The Life of Vergie Winters", starring Ann Harding and John Boles.

FEDERAL JOB HERE NEARER? ESCAPED MEN FREE CAPTIVES

Washington Dispatch Says
Many Ohio Projects To Be Started Soon.

Circleville's new post office project will be placed under contract and work started as soon as plans and specifications can be completed, it was announced today in Washington.

The local building will be a part of the $10,000,000 federal public works program which is expected to get underway as soon as plans are finished.

It was announced in Washington that first construction will be on projects for which land has already been acquired, and since Circleville's site was purchased some time ago, it is believed it will be one of the first to get underway.

TO SPEED PROGRAM

Every effort will be made to speed the program with a view toward relieving unemployment conditions throughout the country, it was stated by Secretary Morgenthau and Postmaster General Farley, who selected and approved the projects for inclusion in the program.

A total of 626 projects will come under the nation-wide program, with 302 of the jobs being financed by a $65,000,000 appropriation in the deficiency appropriation bill, recently passed by Congress.

Ohio projects coming under the deficiency appropriation bill include Dayton, Portsmouth, Cuyahoga Falls, Cleveland, Sidney, Wapakoneta, Pomeroy, Bellevue, Orrville, Barnesville, Loudonville, McConellsville and Warren.

Besides Circleville, other projects which have been authorized from other funds of the federal government and will be started as soon as plans and specifications can be completed are:

Celina, Bryan, Franklin, London, Upper Sandusky, Port Clinton, Kent, Uhrichsville, Sebring, Bedford, Berea and Willoughby.

WILL TO PRESIDE

Clark Will, vice-president of The Third National bank, will preside over the sessions of the 44th annual convention of the Ohio Bankers association which opens in Columbus tomorrow.

Mr. Will is president of the association.

An indication that the banking business is getting better, according to a bulletin issued by the bankers' association, is the fact that an entertainment program has been arranged for the convention for the first time since the depression.

FATE OF PLEA FOR RELIEF IN HANDS OF TRIO

Petitions Bearing 2,000
Names Presented to Commissioners

ACTION IS DELAYED

"Misrepresentation" is Hurled at Peters

The fate of the petitions presented to the Pickaway-co. commissioners today asking them "to co-operate with the state and federal governments by granting relief through the methods prescribed by these governments," will not be known for several days.

This was learned soon after Edward Peters, 510 N. Court-st., presented the petitions, bearing approximately 2,000 signatures, this morning.

"The petitions will be placed on file and it will be several days before we can take any action," John W. Hay, president of the board said.

Commissioner Burr H. Rader, of Pickaway twp., said: "As far as I'm concerned they can be thrown in the waste basket."

GO TO COLUMBUS

Soon after receiving the petitions from Peters, the commissioners, Hay, Rader and Ralph May, White, left by Auditor C. M. White, left for Columbus to attend a meeting of the Ohio Township Trustees and Clerks.

In receiving the petitions, two of the commissioners reprimanded Peters for "misrepresenting the relief situation." They charged that in order to secure signatures, Peters had told prospective signers that the state was sending all relief money into the county. "This is wrong," Mr. Hay, president of the board said, "because the county has been furnishing most of the money for this relief."

At the same time, Hay issued a denial that the commissioners had already voted to do away with state and federal relief after July 1.

"We are willing to cooperate with the state and federal relief agencies as we have done in the past. However, we won't turn

In Fatal Plunge

Jimmy Wedell

FAMED AIRMAN DIES IN CRASH

Wedell, Hero in Recent Dash
To Save Girl, Victim of
"Frozen Stick."

BATON ROUGE, La., June 25.—James R. "Jimmy" Wedell, survivor of many an air mishap, of heroic battles with the elements, of a wild record-breaking dash through the air at more than three hundred miles per hour, was dead today, instantly killed when his plane crashed from an altitude of 300 feet.

The world-famous pilot was instructing Frank Sheeringer, 21-year old student pilot of Mobile, Ala., when the plane, a gypsy moth, English plane, went into a spin and Wedell was unable to regain control.

The crash occurred late yesterday a mile south of Patterson, La., where Wedell and his partner, Harry P. Williams, wealthy lumberman, built the racing planes in which Wedell consistently smashed records.

"STICK FROZEN"

The crash was caused when the student aviator lost his head and "froze to the stick."

That was the assertion made today by Walter Wedell, Jimmie's brother, and Williams, sportsman and Jimmie's backer.

The student will recover. Wedell was killed instantly.

Wedell's speed record for land planes, established at the inter-national air races at Curtiss Field, Glenview, Ill., in September, 1933, was 305.33 miles per hour. He also held numerous speed records for flights between various cities.

The veteran pilot's most recent air exploit was the flying of 5-months-old Sue Trammel from Houston, Tex., to Baltimore last December, for an emergency operation.

WILMA BINKLEY VICTIM, FOUR REMAIN CRITICAL

Ankrom's Automobile Containing Seven
Persons Strikes Rear End of Parked Truck
Carrying 10; 6 Children on Truck Unhurt;
Scene Terrible One.

Wilma Binkley, 22, is dead and the condition of four other persons is precarious today as a result of a terrific automobile-truck accident on Federal Route 22 one mile west of its intersection of Route 104 a few minutes after midnight Saturday.

Miss Binkley died while enroute to Berger hospital. She suffered a crushed face and numerous broken bones. Her neck was not broken as was first reported. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Binkley, E. Mound-st.

Those in critical condition at the hospital are:

Ethel, 21, sister of the deceased girl, who has a fractured upper jaw, fractured nose, lacerations on her forehead, chin, cheeks and left knee. She also lost a number of teeth. Miss Binkley's nose was split open.

UNCONSCIOUS 15 HOURS

Kathleen Van Fossen, 17, who is suffering a skull fracture. She did not regain consciousness until 3 p. m. Sunday and spent a restless night Sunday. Hospital attaches reported her condition slightly improved Monday.

Clay Justice, 42, of near Grove City, who has a perforated scalp wound and a possible fracture of the skull in addition to contusions of the left hip and back. He is irrational.

Daisy Justice, 15, his daughter, who has a possible skull fracture, a lacerated upper lip, and back injuries.

Marjorie Seymour, 17, also patient in the hospital complains of pains in her chest. It is also possible she has head injuries although nothing definite has yet been determined.

Cecil Ankrom, 23, of Lancaster, has a fractured left leg just above the knee in addition to bruises and cuts. He is in the hospital.

IN ANKROM AUTOMOBILE

George Ankrom, 23, York-st., driver of the automobile in which the Circleville parties were riding, was treated at the hospital, then taken home. He has a badly crushed left arm with the elbow being fractured. Several clamps were used to close cuts in his lips, chin and head.

The seventh person in Ankrom's car was Joe Lowery, Hayward-st., who was treated for minor injuries.

In addition to Justice and his daughter, his mother, Mrs. John Justice, and his wife were treated for minor abrasions. Five of Justice's children and a cousin were uninjured.

The accident was beyond a doubt one of the worst in Pickaway-co. history from an injury standpoint. Members of the sheriff's office and police force ambulance drivers and others who are accustomed to the sight of accidents and their results were nauseated by the injuries of the persons in the wreck.

The first report of the accident reached police station and sheriff's office simultaneously. It was reported the crash was at Routes 22 and 104, a dangerous crossing. Two ambulances went to the corner and found nothing. They circled and in a few minutes found the scene. A third ambulance was already there and the three hauled the injured to Berger hospital.

DOCTORS, NURSES BUSY

Drs. D. V. Courtwright, H. D. Jackson, and E. R. Austin were summoned and all three worked until 3:30 a. m. caring for the injured. Much credit must also be given Miss Ethel Kirohofer, hospital superintendent, and her staff of nurses who masterfully handled the situation.

Reconstruction of the fatal accident shows that Justice, driving a truck east on Route 22, had stopped his vehicle presumably to repair a clogged gasoline line. He did not go to the side of the road, witnesses said.

Justice had just crawled into the cab when the Ankrom Chevrolet coach, also bound east on Route 22 from New Holland, crashed against the truck. The impact drove the Justice machine into the ditch about 20 feet from its original position.

The Ankrom automobile remained on its wheels with all its occupants remaining in the car. It was demolished and was the object of much interest in the E. E. Clifton garage, Sunday.

In a few minutes help came, the ambulances called, and the injured taken to the hospital.

Whether the Justice truck was parked without a taillight is not known. Coroner C. E. Bowers investigated the collision, Sunday, with Sheriff Charles Radcliff and

Pennant Race Opens Tonite

With the first half of the city recreation ball league history the second starts this evening with the Purina Chows contesting the Container Corporation outfit in the initial fray.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

THIS ASHVILLE BALL CLUB is going places this summer and right now is perched in first place in the Central Ohio league a full game ahead of its nearest opponent. From the style of ball Art Meier is pitching and the timeliness of the attack the Ashvillers should have little trouble remaining on top the heap.

The team defeated Obetz, 13-5, Sunday while New Albany beat Brice and Grove City blanked Groveport.

Koterba and Toole, Ashville shortstop and first baseman, each hit safely three times with Meier fanning 12 batters.

Columbus winning and losing to Milwaukee gained ground in the American association race, Sunday, as Louisville whipped Minneapolis twice and St. Paul took a pair from the Indianapolis second place team.

THE GREAT WESLEY FERrell, who wouldn't sign with Cleveland this year and was traded for Bob Weiland, lost his first start against the Indians taking third place from Boston.

tainers will pitch Ray Brungs while Manager Dwight Lanman of the Chows has not indicated his hurler. It may be Pug Fowler, who pitches for whoever wants him.

The game begins at 6:30 p. m. Immediately after the contest all managers of the league are urged to attend an important meeting in the Herald office at which time several matters will be definitely settled.

The remainder of the week's schedule includes: Tuesday: McClarren Meats vs. Circleville Oils.

Wednesday: Mecca restaurant vs. Circle City dairy.

Thursday: Given Oils vs. Eshelman Feeds.

Friday afternoon the McClarren Meats playing under the leadership of Charlie Scott defeated the Circleville Oils, 10-4. The game was postponed from a week ago when rain caused a halt.

Buskirk pitched for the Meats with Purcell, Barnes, Gelb, and Smith for the losers.

Eddie Callahan umpired the game.

DUTRA IN FORM

HARRIDGE TO VIEW PENNANT RAISING

COLUMBUS, June 25.—One more notable was added to the list of outstanding sports characters who will be in Columbus Tuesday night to participate in the pennant raising festivities at the Red Bird Stadium.

William Harridge, president of the American League, is the latest celebrity to notify President George M. Trautman of the Red Birds that he will be on hand.

The 1933 championship pennant of the American Association is to be raised at 7:45 by Hank Gowdy, coach of the Boston Braves and former big league star. Gowdy raised the last pennant the Columbus team won in 1907. Pennant ceremonies immediately precede the Columbus-Minneapolis game at 8:30 p. m.

FOLLOWED BARNARD

Harridge is the third president of the American League and has been with that organization since 1900 when Ban Johnson first organized it. Harridge assumed the presidency three years ago on the death of E. S. Barnard who succeeded Johnson.

An outstanding figure in the baseball world, Harridge literally lives, breathes and thinks baseball. He has no other hobby or sport and devotes all of his energies to the promotion of his league and the sport as a whole.

The Red Bird's plant is reputed to be the finest in the United States and although two of the battery of light towers were damaged in Friday's storm, they have been repaired and the entire system will be in perfect order for Tuesday night's game.

LONDOS MEETS JIM BROWNING

Heavyweight Title at Stake As Noted Grapplers Meet In New York.

NEW YORK, June 25.—On the pledged word of commission chairman John J. Phelan, a very earnest and apostolic gentleman who says everything is going to be all right, we are to have a "shooting match" tonight between Jim Londos and Jim Browning for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship any given Wednesday in Wheeling, W. Va., not to forget Kalamazoo and Council Bluffs. But this is different.

Anyhow, General Phelan says it is. He went and asked both of the principals about it last week and they assured him that nothing would happen that wasn't within the best traditions of the sport. He, thereupon, felt so comforted and relieved that he waived the local regulation which previously had insisted that wrestling championships were not championships but exhibitions that came under the head of hog-calling and kindred afflictions and must cease at eleven o'clock regardless of whether both men were on their feet, the floor or the chandeliers.

Tonight's match will, therefore, be for the championship and the general will decide today, after thinking very intently, whether the eleven o'clock curfew will apply. He'll probably make up his mind after he has asked the principals about it.

ODDS AND ENDS

Home Canning, a bulletin for home makers, is available now from the offices of county extension agents. It is free.

Ground corn cobs are becoming increasingly popular as a litter material for brooder houses. The ground cobs absorb moisture.

Two bulletins of timely interest to Ohio farmers, available at the offices of county agricultural agents, are: Chinch Bugs and Their Control, by T. H. Parks; and Eradicating Canada Thistle, by C. J. Willard and R. D. Lewis.

Twenty-four thousand head of cattle were purchased in Minnesota and South Dakota in the first buying operations of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's program for removal of low grade surplus cattle in emergency drought areas.

Most authorities on dogs say that a normal, healthy dog should be bathed as infrequently as possible. Bathing removes the natural oil of the skin. They recommend, instead, frequent combing and vigorous rubbing with a damp cloth to remove the surface dirt from the hair coat.

Seduction Case Started Today; Premier Named

EDMONTON, Alta., June 25.—The most sensational court drama in the history of Canadian jurisprudence will begin unfolding here today—the suit of pretty, blonde, 22-year-old Vivian MacMillan against her father, A. D. MacMillan, former mayor of Edson, against premier John E. Brownlee, 50, for 13 years a minister of the crown and for nine years the head of Alberta's provincial government.

Premier on Trial

Here are the principals in one of the most sensational cases in western Canada's court history—Premier J. E. Brownlee of Alberta and pretty Vivian MacMillan, 22-year-old former government official. The girl, assertedly once a close friend of the premier, accused the government official of seduction. Premier Brownlee faces trial at Edmonton, Alberta.

FAMED AIRMAN DIES IN CRASH

tion. Through wind, fog and snowstorms, when almost all planes were grounded because of the weather, Wedell made the desperate 1400-mile flight safely, in time for Johns Hopkins surgeons to perform the delicate operation that saved the baby girl's life.

PLANNED LONG TRIP

Wedell was vice president of Wedell-Williams Air Service, Inc., at Patterson. Williams, who became interested in Wedell when he latter was learning the tricks of flying by piloting fragile, rickety planes at county fairs around the country, backed his protege to the limit. He planned to finance Wedell on a flight to Melbourne, Australia, this summer. Williams' wife is Marguerite Clark, former movie star.

Wedell was 34 years old. The ship in which Wedell established his speed record he designed and built at Patterson, a little town in the heart of the Evangeline country.

Jimmy's success was achieved despite severe handicaps. He had been blind in one eye since boyhood. His education stopped in his early high school years. His flying instruction consisted of one hour of tutelage. But he learned to fly by barnstorming in decrepit planes, learned about engine design by being his own mechanic. And came to be hailed not only as one of the foremost pilots but also as a great designer and his workshop at Patterson became a shrine for aviators following his creation of a new speed record at Glenview, Ill., last year.

NEW TORRID WAVE GRASPING STATE

Temperature at 95 Here Sunday; Thundershowers Are Predicted.

By International News Service Although thundershowers were forecast for some sections of the state today, weather experts said that from all indications Ohio is in for another sweltering heat wave.

Thundershowers, the tail ends of a storm that brought death to six persons and wrought damage of $500,000 in Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota yesterday, brought some relief in scattered sections of Ohio but the heat wave is expected to become more intense as the prevalent cooling winds subside, according to the weathermen.

Threat of the new heat wave brought gloom to farmers throughout the state. Besides drought damage, farmers were faced with increasing ravage from chinch bugs preying on corn crops. The federal government is planning to ship 13 carloads of creosote to help battle the chinch bug menace.

A survey of temperatures yesterday disclosed that the mercury hung closely in the 90's. Wilmington was one of the state's "hot spots." A temperature of 100 degrees was recorded there. Circleville had 95.

One In a Million

SOME months ago certain New York State officials, during a notorious investigation, were seeking to justify large salaries, fabulous fees and amazing perquisites. In refreshing contrast to that disgusting picture is the county official in the same state who insists his $12,000 salary is excessive and demands a $3,000 cut.

Where public salaries are fixed by the legislature none may tamper with them but the legislature, but there should be nothing to prevent recipients of those salaries from making an annual refund, say in the form of a Christmas gift to the county. Most county treasurers could use the money.

It would appear that this honest officeholder considers $9,000 a year a fair salary for his job. Perhaps it is, but most public officials earn much less than that although they may receive more. The average county or municipal official gives very little time to his public job, giving part of both his time and salary to partisan politics.

Were all political subdivisions such as cities and counties to discharge all their elective officers and place the administration of the public affairs in the hands of deputies and clerks it is probable that subsidized political parties would suffer much worse than public affairs. The system was designed to provide politicians with time and money for politics.

One reason why fountain pens don't work is because the ink at the post office isn't much good.

Keep At It

FURTHER evidence that automobile accidents can be reduced by special efforts on the part of police authorities is given by New York.

Kansas City police recently staged a special drive, with highly satisfactory results rewarding their efforts.

A similar condition now is reported in New York, where Police Commissioner O'Ryan is directing a street and highway safety drive.

Within less than two weeks, a drop of 16 per cent in accidents and fatalities was recorded.

If special safety drives have such highly satisfactory results, why should they not be carried on permanently? Usually there special campaigns are made chiefly by a little more alertness on the part of police in enforcing traffic regulations and appeals to the public to cooperate in the movements.

Laws against speeding and other dangerous forms of driving are made to be enforced daily, not on special occasions. Why should not the police exercise constant vigilance in doing this instead of inaugurating special drives? Numerous lives are lost because of their failure to do this.

THE LONE WOLF'S SON by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Sailing from France to America aboard the S.S. "Navarre," the reformed "Lone Wolf," erstwhile master crook, meets wealthy Fay Crozier, one of his antique shop patrons, and her lovely daughter Fenno. Mrs. Crozier shows Lanyard the famous Habsburg emeralds which she bought secretly to avoid payment of duty. Lanyard's experienced eye discovers that counterfeiters have been substituted for the gems. He promises to try and retrieve the emeralds. Lanyard suspects Maurice Parry, a youthful fellow-passenger, who appears deeply interested in Fenno. The resemblance between Lanyard and Maurice causes the former to wonder if they are related. In a bridge game with two card sharks, Maurice loses heavily. Lanyard joins the players as Parry's partner, catches their opponents cheating and threatens to expose them unless Maurice's loss is called off. Later, Lanyard tells the appreciative Maurice that he can repay him by returning Mrs. Crozier's jewels. The youth removes the top of his cane only to find that Lanyard had seen there before him and had replaced the stolen emeralds with the zircons (false gems). Lanyard chafes Maurice for his lack of cleverness. The boy retorts: "If you think I'm ashamed of being no match for my own father."

CHAPTER VIII

"I must say you don't act as if you found the prospect welcome!" "Reflex that you offer me as my unknown son—if any—a thief."

"And if so? What were you?" "At your age, as I have already pointed out, also a bumptious young jackass. But come, monsieur! It would appear that we do not get anywhere."

"But it seems to me you hardly care to." The young man gave his own version of a baffled shrug. "Frankly, you discourage me."

"Because I decline to play the hypocrite."

"How, 'play the hypocrite'?" "Affect what I do not feel—pretend to approve in one who may or may not turn out to be my own flesh, courses which I actually deplore."

"I see, monsieur. You do not wish to believe."

"You are mistaken"—a slow nod lent the protestation sincerity. "So far so that you find me already, with little more to go on than a certain likeness, half-persuaded. But my reason wants proofs that my heart would dispense with. You might, for example, begin by telling me what your name was before it was Maurice Parry."

"Ah, monsieur! I have had so many."

"No doubt. But the first you can recall, your name as a boy."

With dark eyes fast to Lanyard's the young man deliberately pronounced: "Choin, monsieur—Maurice Choin."

And all at once Lanyard knew he would have been inconsolable, given any other answer; and hearing his own murmur in the hush—"Impossible!"—in immediate denial of it opened his arms. "My dear boy!"

And his son went to him. Akin as both were by lifelong habit to the Latin temper, those two grown men embraced and were not ashamed.

"How did you know?" "I didn't," Maurice protested as they disengaged. "It was only to-night that I guessed. . . . But I never forgot the last words my mother breathed as she lay dying; with my sister dead in her arms—"

"How—"

The youth shook his head. "I hardly know. Think how it must have been with a child caught in that terror which broke, like hell out of a clear sky, on the peaceful home you can't have forgotten. Everything was suddenly blood and flames and great guns bellowing. I recall as fragments of a nightmare, running through a street that was full of dead, clinging to my mother's skirts while she carried little Jeanne, and a great explosion that tore me from her and stunned me. When I recovered sufficiently to crawl to her side, she kissed me, whispered, 'Your father—Michael Lanyard'—and died. After that. . . . I am not sure."

"You were not wounded?" "No; but I must have been for days half-demented. I retain in consecutive glimpses of the child I was wandering across open country in the rain, begging crusts and sleeping where night overtook me, in byres or under hedges. In the end I came to myself convalescent of a fever in the home of some old folk in Antwerp. They had found me delirious in the streets. They permitted me to share their poverty while they lived. But at thirteen I was once again without a home."

"And then—"

"What would you?" the young man lightly deprecated. "I was at that age when one is always hungry; when I couldn't get enough to eat otherwise—I stole. In fine, I grew up a guttersnipe—at fifteen an expert pickpocket, at eighteen a finished burglar, with Antwerp and Brussels too small for me. So I went to London, eventually in Paris."

"Unhappy child! And did it never occur to you to seek for traces of the father whose identity your mother had confided?"

"It never occurred to me that she had meant anything but to recommend me to the charity of some friend of my father's; but I could find no one in Louvain after the Armistice who had ever heard of a Monsieur Michael Lanyard—hardly a soul, indeed, that remembered the father whom I knew only by the name of Maurice Choin. I concluded you to be dead; and it was only a year or so ago that I heard, in Paris, tales of that legendary hero of the French crook, the Lone Wolf, who—they said—when he had finely feathered his nest, retired to private life and under the alias of Michael Lanyard bought an interest in the house of Delibes. It seemed likely he could be the man whom my mother had named, but I had the whim none the less to call on him and ask if he had ever known Maurice Choin of Louvain, my father."

"Why didn't you?" "I was enjoying a holiday in Italy."

"But I returned."

"True. I might have called a second time, but that didn't appeal to me as expedient. The truth is, the youngest told Lanyard with a graceful grin, 'What I had seen of the treasures of Delibes had interested me strangely.'"

"Ah! That small affair, then, was yours? I told them it had been the burglary of a highly practised hand."

"One hoped that the truth would deal no blow to your natural pride of a father."

But Lanyard refused to answer Maurice's smile. "Figure to yourself that I love you," he said in all simplicity, "and never ask me to speak of your imbecility in jest."

"Imbecility!" The young man reddened. "I must say, monsieur, you prove your affection in strange terms."

"Have I pretended to admire the ways of your infatuation?" "You might, I should think, be a little broad-minded—you whom they once called the Lone Wolf!"

"If I had not been that one I might be more patient with your evident impression that his pelt has fallen on your shoulders. They called him the Lone Wolf because he had the wit never to have accomplices to betray him; his identity was never known till long after he had made his last prow!"

"Must you assume I have accomplices?"

"You have one, at least, in myself," Lanyard smiled. "An accomplice after the fact tonight, and probably the only one who will never betray you."

"Not even if I refuse to be moved by your preaching?" "Not even if you continue to disprove so strongly."

"Because I too am an imbecile, in my own fashion, because of this deep affection I already have for you."

"Is it then imbecile to have a father's natural feeling?" "What else, when I must, against my better judgment, protect and cherish one whom I may not trust?"

"You think as ill of me as all that?" "I know men's hearts too well. I know that the man who thinks himself too clever to play the game by the rules is cheating not life but himself; that the man who can't be true to himself will end by being false even to those who love him."

"Yet you were the Lone Wolf when you won the heart of my mother."

"The day I won her I ceased to be the Lone Wolf; not so much for her sake as for purely selfish considerations. A woman may love a man she can't respect, but her love won't last."

"One is to understand the Lone Wolf never prowled again?" "Never."

"What, never? Not even once, for old sake's sake?" "Are you being foolishly impatient? Or just damned impatient?"

"Forgive me. I had merely the wish to be humorous. The contrite look which the son put on passed into a dark stare. 'By what you tell me, you are a sentimentalist. Sorry if I wound you.' A sign of amused indulgence encouraged him. 'You put love on a pedestal: a pretty gesture, but today—is it not a thought démodé?'"

"I am afraid you have been unfortunat in your young experiments."

"Not at all," the boy retorted in some pique. "Permit me to assure you—"

"Since you have it yet to learn that true love is never out of fashion."

"I know women too well to take love seriously."

"I am sure you do. But your views will change, once you are loved by a right woman. Till that happens we only waste each other's time with such discussions." Lanyard got up and, as Maurice rose in turn, dropped both hands upon his shoulders. "Good night, my son. It grows late, and we have all this voyage."

"But," the stamp objected in a twinkling, "aren't you forgetting something?"

"What, for example?" "To make me promise I'll try to be a good boy for your sake."

"That I shall never ask of you."

"What! You don't consider it your duty?"

"Man never yet quitted his folly for anybody's sake but his own, and didn't return to it. The day will come when you will fall out of love with the picture of yourself as a devilish fine fellow, thumbing your nose at a pack of stupid police. Till it does—you couldn't make any promise good you might give me."

But at the door Lanyard turned back for a last word.

"Oh, by the by—watch yourself with Fenno Crozier."

"Why?" Maurice was startled and resentful. "What does she know?"

"Much more than you do. She's far cleverer than you. If you value your secrets, pull wide of that young woman."

Lanyard reserved his wink to the ironic gods till in the dusky passageways that led to his own cabin.

Occupational Diseases Conquered by Science

Silicosis, Once Common and Dreaded by Workers, Is Rare Affliction Today

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States senator from New York Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

WE ARE greatly indebted to the brilliant work of scientists who have wrought about a marked reduction in occupational diseases and accidents. At one time "silicosis" was a common disease of men employed in sand blasting, foundry work and mills, in the making of castings, sandstone products and glass, as well as in quartz, granite and asbestos mining. Today these occupational diseases are almost unknown.

As a result of undue exposure to silicates, a sand compound, workers became victims of such disturbances of the lungs as "anthracosis," "silicosis," "siderosis," "asbestosis," and "pneumoconiosis." These diseases with terrible names result from exposure to various kinds of dust which the workers inhale. Fundamentally they are identical, and all of them lead to gradual impairment of the health.

Effects the Lungs

Great harm is done by continually taking silicates or other irritating dust into the lungs. It leads to chronic irritation and ultimately the formation of fibrous tissue and thickening of the lungs. As a result of this change, breathing becomes difficult and the lungs fail to perform their regular function.

If the disease is not recognized at an early stage and the workman is permitted to continue with his work, he becomes more and more susceptible to various infections of the lungs. He may contract pneumonia which in many instances develops into tuberculosis. The heart becomes weakened because of the additional work placed upon it, and within a very short time the individual becomes a chronic invalid.

Fortunately, through better understanding of the means of prevention, industrial medicine has conquered this disease. Mines are now equipped with ventilation systems, safety lamps and mechanical devices that detect poisonous gases and increased amounts of dust. The circulation of excess dust is prevented by wet drilling which diminishes the inhalation of irritating substances.

Masks as Protection

Where engineering facilities are not sufficient to control the dust, the workmen are made to wear masks similar to those used in war during a gas attack. In addition to these precautions, workmen who may be exposed to dust are given physical examinations. Men who have weak lungs or any tendency towards tuberculosis are not permitted to engage in this type of work. Working hours have been so adjusted that the danger of exposure to dust particles is greatly reduced.

A good many men are victims of their work. But it is gratifying to know that modern civilization is taking every precaution to minimize the dangers and pitfalls of workers employed in various forms of labor. State and federal laws are constantly being revised and every effort is being made to protect the health of these men and women.

Answers to Health Queries

M. H. Q.—What would cause a child to be very fretful during the night? She has poor appetite, is nervous and irritable and very thin.

A.—These symptoms may be due to intestinal worms but it would be well to have the child examined to make sure there is nothing seriously wrong with her. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

C. K. Q.—My husband goes to sleep when he sits down to read a paper; he also goes to sleep when he drives the car. Please tell me what would cause this.

A.—This condition should not be neglected. These symptoms indicate that your husband's trouble may be due to auto-intoxication. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AT THE GRAND

The age-old problem of "the eternal triangle" is presented in a new light in "Glamour," the Universal drama at the Grand.

Constance Cummings, Paul Lukas and Phillip Reed play the characters at three points of the love triangle, in Edna Ferber's story. In the picture Miss Cummings, the wife of Paul Lukas, is a theatrical star, and a new romance enters her life when Reed is engaged as her leading man.

Several original songs introduced by Reed in "Glamour" and there are also alluring specialties during the unfolding plot. The most rhythmic of these is the Rumba Exotic, introduced by Reed and Miss Cummings, especially composed music.

Think how many "great" actresses' fail because they can't enough brilliant men to do work.

To become a great benefactor of the race, you must be a good make-up, becoming frocks and ladies.

ZERO HOUR NEAR!

DEEDHAM, Mass., June 25.—Nineteen-year-old Norma Millen, the doll girl, faces her zero hour today.

The pretty bride of Murton Millen, convicted murderer, was slated to take the witness stand to battle for her freedom at her trial as an accessory after the Needham Trust company robbery in which two policemen were slain by her machine-gunner husband.

Grabbing a knife, he rushed to the home of another uncle, Edward Harvey, 63, and broke through a hastily erected barricade by smashing in a window. He climbed into the kitchen of the home where he

Nations Find Man Likes to Gamble and Ease Laws

Machines for shuffling lottery numbers.

A steeplechase.

Waking up to the fact that man likes to gamble, governments of many nations are repealing restrictions on lotteries, horse race betting, wagers on dog races and other forms of gambling which have been regarded as "sinful".

In some instances governments even are going so far as to stage their own lotteries to help balance the budget and alleviate taxation. This layout shows some scenes associated with popular forms of gambling, baskets for shuffling lottery tickets, and a steeplechase.

MADMANKILLSONE, HURTS TWO OTHERS

BELLEFONTAINE, June 25.—A madman, armed with a club and a large knife, who ran amuck in a small Logan-co community yesterday, beating one man to death and wounding two other persons, was in Mary Rutan hospital with a self-inflicted wound today.

Victim of the tragedy, which shattered the Sunday quiet of West Mansfield, was Lanson B. Harvey, 76, widely known surveyor. His assailant, a nephew, Roy Harvey, 40, was captured but only after he had wounded another uncle and slashed his own throat with a broad knife.

The nephew, who disappeared a short time after relatives filed a lunacy warrant against him, reappeared yesterday as Mrs. Harvey, 72, walked to a barn at the rear of her home. He clubbed the woman to the ground with a stake and then ran to the house and beat his uncle to death.

SMASHED WINDOW.—Grabbing a knife, he rushed to the home of another uncle, Edward Harvey, 63, and broke through a hastily erected barricade by smashing in a window. He climbed into the kitchen of the home where he slashed his Uncle Edward with a knife.

His aunt rushed to the home of neighbors who cornered the madman in the kitchen of the home. As a handful of them closed in on the lunatic, he drew the knife across his own throat.

He was rushed to Mary Rutan hospital where Mrs. Harvey and his uncle Edward also are receiving treatment. Sheriff Charles Bewly posted a guard over Roy and said the man, although apparently a lunatic, would be charged with murder if he recovers so that he could be held without gaining freedom under bond.

Lanson Harvey, the victim, was former surveyor of Union-co and assistant surveyor in Hardin and Madison counties. He was widely known throughout this section of the state. Roy, who ran amuck, formerly operated a poolroom in Ada in Hardin-co.

California's Grizzlies Extinct.—California grizzly bears, now extinct, were the largest of their species, although their diet was mainly wild honey, grasses and grubs.

Zaro Agha, Claiming 160 Years, is Ailing

ISTANBUL, June 25.—The Children's hospital here has a patient, 160 years old. He is the famous Zaro Agha who made a trip to the United States after his 150th year.

Because of his advanced age hospital authorities held little hope for his recovery. Zaro Agha is said to recognize that but to be far more disturbed by his realization that some of the doctors doubted that he is as old as he claims to be.

"IT'S A CINCH"

It's as simple as falling off a log—why didn't I do that long ago—it doesn't cost much either, come to figure it out. I had often read the advertising in the papers about how easy it was to borrow at that place on West Main Street in Circleville, called The City Loan, but I hesitated because I always thought that they would have the same old red tape, or that they wouldn't make a loan to a common laborer like myself on my own signature. Am I glad I went to see them—sure I got the money!

THAT TIRED "OFFICE" LOOK—

—and then he Smoked a Camel!

NEED ENERGY?

Here's the latest word from Science on increasing
Vim and Energy...quickly!

Today we call attention again to important facts which were presented to smokers in a recent item in this paper.

Perhaps you overlooked it. We repeat:
You can release new vigor, when tired, by smoking a Camel.

This comes from the "energizing effect" in

Camels as recently confirmed and described by a famous New York scientific laboratory. Everyone gets fatigued...cross...down in the dumps...when his energy is used up. But the way to turn on more energy has now been pointed out, by actual Camel smokers who tell of their own experiences. And by up-to-date research made in the laboratories of science.

GIRL KILLED, 10 HURT IN AUTO CRASH

General Johnson Submits to "Suppressor" of Volatile Speeches

WASHINGTON — General Johnson, at times an alleged suppressor of the press, now has submitted to an official suppressor of himself.

He is James Cope, until recently a reporter for the Associated Press, and his job will be to try to muzzle the volatile ex-cavalry officer when he starts flying off the handle over some innocuous incident.

Friends of the General—and he still has a lot—say that Cope is an adviser he has needed for a long time. Some of Johnson's rhetorical "bulls" have come near blowing his own job out from under him.

Latest, the crusty blast about Soviet Russia and its alleged influence among the steel workers, not only caused extreme indignation in labor circles, but also some trepidation at the State Department.

For a high-ranking officer, especially one who is virtually a Cabinet member, to berate a friendly government as Johnson did Russia, has led to diplomatic apoplexy in the past. General Smiley Butler, secretary of the Marine Corps, was threatened with court-martial for saying less about Premier Mussolini.

The Russian Embassy decided to ignore the incident, but Roosevelt couldn't. Particularly he could not ignore the resentment of the steel workers. That was why he lifted the steel labor dispute from Johnson's hands and gave it to Miss Perkins.

Cope, the new Johnson-suppressor, is an able henchman. But he will have his hands full. Johnson's speeches in the past have been blue-penciled and deleted. To no avail. Once on his feet, Johnson simply can't resist the temptation to bark glorious vituperatives into the microphone.

If Cope can hold him, he'll be a superman.

New Deal Dogs

The White House has a new dog—"Fido," a battle-scarred bull pup belonging to Gus Genierich, the President's personal bodyguard.

Pal joins a long and famous list: "Laddie Boy, Rob Roy, Pat, Weegie, Megs, Marjorie, Winks."

No social register has listed these names, yet their bearers have had freer access to the White House than Cabinet Members and diplomats.

Of them all, only Winks remains—in the flesh. Rob Roy is still in the White House in an oil painting. Enter by the lower doorway on the east side; the first painting is of Mrs. Collidge with her collie, Rob Roy, done by Howard Chandler Christy.

The best known dog in Harding's time was Laddie Boy, a short, brown airhead. In Coolidge's time it was Rob Roy, who died while the President was in the Black Hills.

In Hoover's time there were two. A Norwegian wolfhound, nicknamed Weegie by the children, a police dog, Pat, and two setters. It was Weegie who made the front pages by biting a Marine. Mr. Hoover, departing, took both Weegie and Pat to Palo Alto.

Of the New Deal dogs, Mrs. Roosevelt's Meggie (or Megs), a black Scottie, has been left with friends to be cared for in "old age." She, too, was in the biting class. But a more Marine was beneath her. She chose a newswoman, May Craig.

Determined to outdo former records, Major, the President's police dog, also went for higher game, biting a Senator, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, and he, too, has been sent away. Until Pal arrived the other day, only Winks, the President's setter, remained.

Note:—There is no special custodian of the kennels today as under Coolidge and Hoover. During the Old Deal as many as six dogs lived at the White House at one time. They came chiefly as gifts from persons who thought the President should have a dog, or another dog, or a different dog, and who sought a greater intimate-

STRIKING MEN IN UNION AREA CRY 'SLAVERY'

Appeal Sent to Labor Chief in Washington Seeking Help

CLASH IS FEARED

Special Deputies Ordered to Fields

KENTON, June 25.—An appeal for governmental intervention in the strike of 600 union farm laborers in the onion fields of the Scioto marshes was sent to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins at Washington today.

Charging that conditions of the striking workers "were worse than those of slaves before Civil War days," J. M. Rizer, organizer for the National Farm laborers' union of which the strikers are members sent a telegraphic appeal to Secretary Perkins. It said:

"Condition in Marion, twp., Hardin-co., state of Ohio: People working from five to 15 cents an hour. They are worse than the slaves before the Civil War."

"Houses unfit to live in. Hardly any clothes, or food. No sewage system. They are on strike. Employers refuse to meet them. Children from eight years on up are working for 10 hours a day."

"Something has got to be done right away for these people. Send somebody to check conditions at once if possible."

Meanwhile, Sheriff Wilbur Mitchell was to select a force of 50 special deputy sheriffs for duty in the onion fields from a list of approximately 70 applicants. Many of the latter included ex-soldiers and members of the local post of the Ohio National Guard.

First patrols of the special deputies were expected to be sent into the fields shortly after noon, according to Mitchell. He said he had been advised that some owners of large farms planned to start cultivation today even in face of the walkout and he expressed fear that there might be minor clashes between pickets and men willing to work.

The Scioto marshlands comprised a 40-square-mile area where the largest onion fields in the nation are located. There are approximately 17,000 acres of land under cultivation and the 100 large farms and the 75 smaller farms ship about 3,200 carloads of onions every harvest season.

Church Demands Movie Cleanup

Scene from the "Life of Vergie Winters"

Will Hays (Scene of a nudist movie, which was not shown in several states)

Boycott of motion pictures has been threatened by members of the Catholic faith unless the movie industry accedes to demands of the church that salacious and immoral films be cleaned up. A formal demand for the cleanup has been made at a meeting in Cincinnati of representatives of Will Hays, movie czar, and church officials, headed by Archbishop John T. McNicholas. As the church campaign waged, the Ohio Board of Censors banned the showing of the new movie, "The Life of Vergie Winters," starring Ann Harding and John Boles.

FEDERAL JOB HERE NEARER? ESCAPED MEN FREE CAPTIVES

Washington Dispatch Says Many Ohio Projects To Be Started Soon.

Circleville's new post office project will be placed under contract and work started as soon as plans and specifications can be completed. It was announced today in Washington.

The local building will be a part of the $10,000,000 federal public works program which is expected to get underway as soon as plans are finished.

It was announced in Washington that first construction will be on projects for which land has already been acquired, and since Circleville's site was purchased some time ago, it is believed it will be one of the first to get underway.

TO SPEED PROGRAM

Every effort will be made to speed the program with a view toward relieving unemployment conditions throughout the country. It was stated by Secretary Morgenthau and Postmaster General Farley, who selected and approved the projects for inclusion in the program.

A total of 626 projects will come under the nation-wide program, with 307 of the jobs being financed by a $65,000,000 appropriation in the deficiency appropriation bill, recently passed by Congress.

Ohio projects coming under the deficiency appropriation bill include Dayton, Portsmouth, Chuyahoga Falls, Cleveland, Sidney, Wapakoneta, Pomeroy, Bellevue, Orrville, Barnesville, Loudonville, McConnellsville and Warren.

Besides Circleville, other projects which have been authorized from other funds of the federal government and will be started as soon as plans and specifications can be completed are:

Celina, Bryan, Franklin, London, Upper Sandusky, Port Clinton, Kent, Uhrichsville, Sebring, Bedford, Berea and Willoughby.

FATE OF PLEA FOR RELIEF IN HANDS OF TRIO

Petitions Bearing 2,000 Names Presented to Commissioners

ACTION IS DELAYED

"Misrepresentation" is Hurlled at Peters

The fate of the petitions presented to the Pickaway-co commissioners today asking them "to co-operate with the state and federal governments by granting relief through the methods prescribed by these governments," will not be known for several days.

This was learned soon after Edward Peters, 510 N. Court-st., presented the petitions, bearing approximately 2,000 signatures, this morning.

"The petitions will be placed on file and it will be several days before we can take any action," John W. Hay, president of the board said.

Commissioner Burr H. Rader, of Pickaway-twp., said: "As far as I'm concerned they can be thrown in the waste basket."

GO TO COLUMBUS

Soon after receiving the petitions from Peters, the commissioners, Hay, Rader and Ralph May, accompanied by Auditor C. M. White, left for Columbus to attend a meeting of the Ohio Township Trustees and Clerks.

In receiving the petitions, two of the commissioners reprimanded Peters for "misrepresenting the relief situation." They charged that in order to secure signatures, Peters had told prospective signers that the state was sending all relief money into the county. "This is wrong," Mr. Hay, president of the board said, "because the county has been furnishing most of the money for this relief."

At the same time, Hay issued a denial that the commissioners had already voted to do away with state and federal relief after July 1.

"We are willing to cooperate with the state and federal relief agencies as we have done in the past. However, we won't turn

In Fatal Plunge

Jimmy Wedell

FAMED AIRMAN DIES IN CRASH

Wedell, Hero in Recent Dash To Save Girl, Victim of "Frozen Stick."

BATON ROUGE, La., June 25.—James R. "Jimmy" Wedell, survivor of many an air mishap, of heroic battles with the elements, of a wild record-breaking dash through the air on more than three hundred miles per hour, was dead today, instantly killed when his plane crashed from an altitude of 300 feet.

The world-famous pilot was instructing Frank Sneeringer, 21-year old student pilot of Mobile, Ala., when the plane, a gypsy moth, English plane, went into a spin and Wedell was unable to regain control.

"STICK FROZEN"

The crash was caused when the student aviator lost his head and "froze to the stick."

That was the assertion made today by Walter Wedell, Jimmie's brother, and William, sportsman and Jimmie's backer.

The student will recover. Wedell was killed instantly.

Wedell's speed record for land planes, established at the inter-national Air races at Curtiss Field, Glenview, Ill., in September, 1933, was 305.33 miles per hour. He also held numerous speed records for flights between various cities.

The veteran pilot's most recent air exploit was the flying of 5-month-old Sue Trammell from Houston, Tex., to Baltimore last December, for an emergency operation.

WILMA BINKLEY VICTIM; FOUR REMAIN CRITICAL

Ankrom's Automobile Containing Seven Persons Strikes Rear End of Parked Truck Carrying 10; 6 Children on Truck Unhurt; Scene Terrible One.

Wilma Binkley, 22, is dead and the condition of four other persons is precarious today as a result of a terrific automobile-truck accident on Federal Route 22 one mile west of its intersection of Route 104 a few minutes after midnight Saturday.

Miss Binkley died while enroute to Berger hospital. She suffered a crushed face and numerous broken bones. Her neck was not broken as was first reported. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Binkley, E. Mound-st.

Those in critical condition at the hospital are:

Ethel, 21, sister of the deceased girl, who has a fractured upper jaw, fractured nose, lacerations on her forehead, chin, cheeks and left knee. She also lost a number of teeth. Miss Binkley's nose was split open.

MRS. DEAN, 70, DIES

Funeral services will be held at the home in Marion, Tuesday morning with burial in Forest cemetery at 1 or 1:30 p. m. Tuesday for Mrs. Oliver Dean, 70, who died Saturday at 6 a. m. of diabetes.

She is a former resident of this city and is survived by seven sons and three daughters, a sister, Mrs. Frank Kline Sr., this city; three brothers, George and John Rihl, this city, and Jacob Rihl, of near Mead.

Clay Justice, 42, of near Grove City, who has a perforated stomach wound and a possible fracture of the skull in addition to contusions of the left hip and back, is in irrational condition.

Clay Justice, 15, his daughter, who has a possible skull fracture, is lacerated upper lip, and injuries.

Marjorie Seymour, 11, daughter of Justice, has a possible skull fracture of the skull in addition to contusions of the left hip and back, is in irrational condition.

Cecil Ankrom, 23, of Loudonville, has a fractured left leg just above the knee in addition to lacerations and cuts. He is in the hospital.

George Ankrom, 23, York-st., driver of the automobile in which the Circleville parties were riding, was treated at the hospital, then taken home. He has a badly crushed left arm with the elbow being fractured. Several clamps were used to close cuts in his lips, chin and head.

The seventh person in Ankrom's car was Joe Lowery, Hayward-st., who was treated for minor injuries.

In addition to Justice and his daughter, his mother, Mrs. John Justice, and his wife were treated for minor abrasions. Five of Justice's children and a cousin were uninjured.

The accident was beyond a doubt one of the worst in Pickaway-co history from an injury standpoint. Members of the sheriff's office and police force, ambulance drivers and others who are accustomed to the sight of accidents and their results were nauseated by the injuries of the persons in the wreck.

The first report of the accident reached police station and sheriff's office simultaneously. It was reported the crash was at Routes 22 and 104, a dangerous crossing. Two ambulances went to the corner and found nothing. They circled and in a few minutes found the scene. A third ambulance was already there and the three hauled the injured to Berger hospital.

DOCTORS, NURSES BUSY

Drs. D. V. Courtright, H. D. Jackson, and E. R. Austin were summoned and all three worked until 3:30 a. m. caring for the injured. Much credit must also be given Miss Ethel Kirchoff, hospital superintendent, and her staff of nurses who masterfully handled the situation.

Reconstruction of the fatal accident shows that Justice, driving a truck east on Route 22, had stopped his vehicle presumably to repair a clogged gasoline line. He did not go to the side of the road, witnesses said.

Justice had just cranked into his cab when the Ankrom Chevrolet coach also bound east on Route 22 from New Holland crashed against the truck. The impact drove the Justice machine into the ditch about 20 feet from its original position.

The Ankrom automobile remained on its wheels with all its occupants remaining in the car. It was demolished and was the object of much interest in the E. E. Clifton garage, Sunday.

In a few minutes help came, the ambulances called, and the injured taken to the hospital.

Whether the Justice truck was parked without a taillight is not known. Coroner C. E. Bowen investigated the collision, along with Sheriff Charles Bader.

HARRIDGE TO VIEW PENNANT RAISING

COLUMBUS, June 25.—One more notable was added to the list of outstanding sports characters who will be in Columbus Tuesday night to participate in the pennant raising festivities at the Red Bird Stadium.

William Harridge, president of the American League, is the latest celebrity to notify President George M. Trautman of the Red Birds that he will be on hand.

The 1933 championship pennant of the American Association is to be raised at 7:45 by Hank Gowdy, coach of the Boston Braves and former big league star. Gowdy raised the last pennant the Columbus team won in 1907. Pennant ceremonies immediately precede the Columbus-Minneapolis game at 8:30 p. m.

FOLLOWED BARNARD
Harridge is the third president

of the American League and has been with that organization since 1900 when Ban Johnson first organized it. Harridge assumed the presidency three years ago on the death of E. S. Barnard who succeeded Johnson.

An outstanding figure in the baseball world, Harridge literally lives, breathes and thinks baseball. He has no other hobby or sport and devotes all of his energies to the promotion of his league and the sport as a whole. Tuesday night's game, incidentally, will be the first game that he has ever witnessed under the floodlights.

The Red Bird's plant is reputed to be the finest in the United States and although two of the battery of light towers were damaged in Friday's storm, they have been repaired and the entire system will be in perfect order for Tuesday night's game.

LONDOS MEETS JIM BROWNING

Heavyweight Title at Stake As Noted Grapplers Meet In New York.

NEW YORK, June 25.—On the pledged word of commission chairman John J. Phelan, a very earnest and apostolic gentleman who says everything is going to be all right, we are to have a "shootin' match" tonight between Jim Londos and Jim Browning for the world's heavyweight wrestling championship any given Wednesday in Wheeling, W. Va., not to forget Kalamazoo and Council Bluffs. But this is different.

Anyhow, General Phelan says it is. He went and asked both of the principals about it last week and they assured him that nothing would happen that wasn't within the best traditions of the sport. He, therefore, felt so comforted and relieved that he waived the local regulation which previously had insisted that wrestling championships were not championships but exhibitions that came under the head of hog-calling and kindred afflictions and must cease at eleven o'clock regardless of whether both men were on their feet, the floor or the bandwagon.

Tonight's match will, therefore, be for the championship and the general will decide today, after thinking very intently, whether the eleven o'clock curfew will apply. He'll probably make up his mind after he has asked the principals about it.

ODDS AND ENDS

Home Canning, a bulletin for home makers is available now from the offices of county extension agents. It is free.

Ground corn cobs are becoming increasingly popular as a litter material for brooder houses. The ground cobs absorb moisture.

Two bulletins of timely interest to Ohio farmers, available at the offices of county agricultural agents, are: Chinch Bugs and Their Control, by T. H. Parks; and Eradicating Canada Thistle, by C. J. Willard and R. D. Lewis.

Twenty-four thousand head of cattle were purchased in Minnesota and South Dakota in the first buying operations of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's program for removal of low grade surplus cattle in emergency drought areas.

Most authorities on dogs say that a normal, healthy dog should be bathed as infrequently as possible. Bathing removes the natural oil of the skin. They recommend, instead, frequent combing and vigorous rubbing with a damp cloth to remove the surface dirt from the hair coat.

COLUMBUS The "cold, gray walls" of Ohio Penitentiary keep it comfortable for the "boys," Warden Thomas says, on the hot summer nights.

COMMERCIAL POINT

Jerry Raser, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Raser of Commercial Point, celebrated his fourth birthday with a circus party, Tuesday afternoon, June 19.

Seduction Case Started Today; Premier Named

EDMONTON, Alta., June 25.—The most sensational court drama in the history of Canadian jurisprudence will begin unfolding here today—the suit of pretty, blonde, 22-year-old Vivian MacMillan and her father, A. D. MacMillan, premier mayor of Edmonton, against Premier John E. Brownlee, 50, for 15 years a minister of the crown and for nine years the head of Alberta's provincial government.

Premier on Trial

Here are the principals in one of the most sensational cases in western Canada's court history—Premier J. E. Brownlee of Alberta and pretty Vivian MacMillan, 22-year-old former government employee. The girl, assertedly once a close friend of the premier, accused the government official of seduction. Premier Brownlee faces trial at Edmonton, Alberta.

FAMED AIRMAN DIES IN CRASH

tion. Through wind, fog and snowstorms, when almost all planes were grounded because of the weather, Wedell made the desperate 1400-mile flight safely, in time for Johns Hopkins surgeons to perform the delicate operation that saved the baby girl's life.

PLANNED LONG TRIP

Wedell was vice president of Wedell-Williams Air Service, Inc., at Patterson. Williams, who became interested in Wedell when the latter was learning the tricks of flying by piloting fragile, rickety planes at county fairs around the country, backed his protégé to the limit. He planned to finance Wedell on a flight to Melbourne, Australia, this summer. Williams' wife is Marguerite Clark, former movie star.

Wedell was 34 years old. The ship in which Wedell established his speed record he designed and built at Patterson, a little town in the heart of the Evangeline country.

Jimmy's success was achieved despite severe handicaps. He had been blind in one eye since boyhood. His education stopped in his early high school years. His flying instruction consisted of one hour of tutelage. But he learned to fly by barnstorming in decrepit planes, learned about engine design by being his own mechanic. And came to be hailed not only as one of the foremost pilots but also as a great designer and his workshop at Patterson became a shrine for aviators following his reaction of a new speed record at Glenview, Ill., last year.

Courtship consists of a man running after a girl until she catches him.

NEW TORRID WAVE GRASPING STATE

Temperature at 95 Here Sunday; Thundershowers Are Predicted.

By International News Service Although thundershowers were forecast for some sections of the state today, weather experts said that from all indications Ohio is in for another sweltering heat wave.

Thundershowers, the tail ends of a storm that brought death to six persons and wrought damage of $500,000 in Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota yesterday, brought some relief in scattered sections of Ohio but the heat wave is expected to become more intense as the prevalent cooling winds subside, according to the weathermen.

Threat of the new heat wave brought gloom to farmers throughout the state. Besides drought damage, farmers were faced with increasing ravage from chinch bugs preying on corn crops. The federal government is planning to ship 13 carloads of insecticide to help battle the chinch bug menace.

A survey of temperatures yesterday disclosed that the mercury hung closely in the 90's. Wilmington was one of the state's "hot spots." A temperature of 100 degrees was recorded there. Circleville had 95.

Kittrells was convicted of the first degree murder of Thomas Mitchell during a robbery in his home county which netted him only $2.60.

Establish Night Court

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—After years of struggling along as a small town, Cheyenne recently reached a truly metropolitan status. A night court, for the trial of petty offenders, has been established. One In a Million

SOME months ago certain New York State officials, during a notorious investigation, were seeking to justify large salaries, fabulous fees and amazing perquisites. In refreshing contrast to that disgusting picture is the county official in the same state who insists his $12,000 salary is excessive and demands a $3,000 cut.

Where public salaries are fixed by the legislature none may tamper with them but the legislature, but there should be nothing to prevent recipients of those salaries from making an annual refund, say in the form of a Christmas gift to the county. Most county treasuries could use the money.

It would appear that this honest officeholder considers $9,000 a year a fair salary for his job. Perhaps it is, but most public officials earn much less than that although they may receive more. The average county or municipal official gives very little time to his public job, giving part of both his time and salary to partisan politics.

Were all political subdivisions such as cities and counties to discharge all their elective officers and place the administration of the public affairs in the hands of deputies and clerks it is believed that subsidized political parties would suffer much worse than public affairs. The system was designed to provide politicians with time and money for politics.

One reason why fountain pens don't work is because the ink at the post office isn't much good.

Keep At It

FURTHER evidence that automobile accidents can be reduced by special efforts on the part of police authorities is given by New York.

Kansas City police recently staged a special drive, with highly satisfactory results rewarding their efforts.

A similar condition now is reported in New York, where Police Commissioner O'Ryan is directing a street and highway safety drive.

Within less than two weeks, a drop of 16 per cent in accidents and fatalities was recorded.

If special safety drives have such highly satisfactory results, why should they not be carried on permanently? Usually there are special campaigns are made chiefly by a little more alertness on the part of police in enforcing traffic regulations and appeals to the public to cooperate in the movements.

Laws against speeding and other dangerous forms of driving are made to be enforced daily, not on special occasions. Why should not the police exercise constant vigilance in doing this instead of inaugurating special drives? Numerous lives are lost because of their failure to do this.

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Sailing from France to America aboard the S.S. "Navarre," the reformed "Lone Wolf," erstwhile master crook, meets wealthy Fay Crozier, one of his antique shop patrons, and her lovely daughter Fenna. Mrs. Crozier shows Lanyard the famous Habsburg emeralds which she bought secretly to avoid payment of duty. Lanyard's eyes are attracted by the emeralds, and he is tempted to steal them. He promises to try and retrieve the emeralds. Lanyard suspects Maurice Parry, a youthful fellow-passenger, who appears deeply interested in Fenna. This resemblance between Lanyard and Maurice causes the former to wonder if they are related. In a bridge game with two card sharks, Maurice loses heavily. Lanyard joins the players as Parry's partner, catches their opponents cheating and threatens to expose them unless Maurice's loss is called off. Later, Lanyard tells the appreciative Maurice that he can repay him by returning Mrs. Crozier's jewels. The youth removes the top of his cane only to find that Lanyard had been there before him and had replaced the stolen emeralds with the zircons (false gems). Lanyard chafes Maurice for his lack of cleverness. The boy retorts: "If you think I'm ashamed of being no match for my own father," Lanyard believed his son had been killed with the rest of his family during the war.

CHAPTER VIII

"I must say you don't act as if you found the prospect welcome!" "Reflex that you offer me as my unknown son—if only a thief." "And if so? What were you?" "At your age, as I have already pointed out, also a bumptious young jackass. But come, monsieur! It would appear that we do not get anywhere."

"But it seems to me you hardly care to." The young man gave his own version of a baffled shrug. "Frankly, I discourage me."

"Because I decline to play the hypocrite?" "How, 'play the hypocrite'?" "Affect what do not feel—pretend to approve in one who may not turn out to be my own flesh, courses which I actually deplore."

"I see, monsieur. You do not wish to believe."

"You are mistaken—a slow nod indicated the protest since the disputable so far so that you find me already, with little more to go on than a certain likeness, half-remembered. But my reason wants proofs that my heart would dispense with. You might, for example, begin by telling me what your name was before it was Maurice Parry."

"Ah, monsieur! I have had so many."

"No doubt. But the first you can recall, your name as a boy."

With dark eyes fast to Lanyard's the young man deliberately pronounced: "Choin, monsieur—Maurice Choin."

And all at once Lanyard knew he would have been inconsolable, given any other answer; and hearing his own murmur in the hush—"Impossible!"—in immediate denial of it opened his arms. "My dear boy!"

And his son went to him. Alkin as both were by lifelong habit to the Latin temper, those two grown men embraced and were not ashamed.

"How did you know?" "I didn't," Maurice protested as they disengaged. "It was only tonight that I guessed. But I never forgot the last words my mother breathed as she lay dying, with my sister dead in her arms."

"How?" "The youth shook his head. "It's hard to know. Think how it must have been with a child caught in that terror which broke, like hell out of a clear sky, on the peaceful home you can't have forgotten. Everything was suddenly blood and flames and great guns bellowing. I recall as fragments of a nightmare, running through a street that was full of dead things to my mother's skirts while she carried little Jeanne, and a great explosion that tore me from her and stunned me. When I recovered sufficiently to crawl to her side, she kissed me, whispered, 'Your father—Michael Lanyard—has died. After that, I am not sure.'"

"You were not wounded?" "No; but I must have been for days half-demented. I retain in consecutive glimpses of the child I was wandering across open country in the rain, begging, cursing and sleeping where night overtook me, in byres or under hedges. In the end I came to myself convalescent of a fever in the home of some old folk in Antwerp. They had found me delirious in the streets. They permitted me to share their poverty while they lived. But at last I was once again without a home."

"And then—?" "What would you?" the young man lightly deprecated. "I was at that age when one is always hungry; when I couldn't get enough to eat otherwise I stole. I grew up a guttersnipe at fifteen an expert pickpocket, at eighteen a finished burglar, with Antwerp and Brussels too small for me. So I tried my luck in Berlin, later in London, eventually in Paris."

"Unhappy child! And did it never occur to you to seek for traces of the father whose identity your mother had confided?" "It never occurred to me that she had meant anything but to recommend me to the charity of some friend of my father's; but I could find no one in Louvain, the town of my birth, who had ever heard of a Monsieur Michael Lanyard—hardly a soul, indeed, that remembered the father whom I knew only by the name of Maurice Choin. I conceived you to be dead; and it was only years ago that I heard, in Paris, tales of that legendary hero of the French crook, the Lone Wolf, who—they said—when he had finely feathered his nest, retired to private life and under the alias of Michael Lanyard bought an interest in the house of Delibes. It seemed to me, as I thought of the man whom my mother had named, that I had the whim none the less to call on him and ask if he had ever known Maurice Choin of Louvain, my father."

"Why didn't you?" "They told me, at Delibes', you were enjoying a holiday in Italy."

"But I returned?" "True. I might have called a second time, but that didn't appeal to me as expedient. The truth is, the youngest told Lanyard with a graceful grin, 'what I had seen of the treasures of Delibes had interested me strangely.'"

"Ah! That small affair, then, was yours? I told them it had been the burglary of a highly practised hand."

"One hoped that the truth would deal no blow to your natural pride of father."

Lanyard refused to answer Maurice's smile. "Figure to yourself that I love you," he said in simplicity, "and never ask me to speak of your imbecility in jest."

"Imbecility!" The young man reddened. "I must say, monsieur, you prove your affection in strange terms."

"Have I pretended to admire the ways of your infatuation?" "You might, I should think, be a little broad-minded—your whom they once called the Lone Wolf!"

"If I had not been that one I might be more patient with your evident impression that his pelt has fallen on your shoulders. They called him the Lone Wolf because he had the wit never to let his accomplices to betray him—his identity was never known till long after he had made his last prowl."

"Must you assume I have accomplices?"

"You have one, at least, in myself," Lanyard smiled, "I accomplish after the fact tonight and probably the only one who will never betray you."

"Not even if I refuse to be moved by your preaching?" "Not even if you continue to discredit your good sense."

"Because I too am an imbecile, in my own fashion, because of this deep affection I already have for you."

"Is it then imbecile to have a father's natural feeling?" "What else, when I must, against my better judgment, protect and cherish one whom I may not trust?"

"You think as ill of me as all that?" "I know men's hearts too well. I know that the man who thinks himself too clever to play the game by the rules is cheating not life but himself; that the man who can't be true to himself will end by being false even to those who love him."

"Yet you were the Lone Wolf when you won the heart of my mother?" "The day I won her I ceased to be the Lone Wolf; not so much for her sake as for purely selfish considerations. A woman may love a man she can't respect, but her love won't last."

"One is to understand the Lone Wolf never provided again?" "Never."

"What, never? Not even once, for old sake's sake?" "Are you being foolishly impatient? Or just damned impatient?"

"Forgive me. I had merely the wish to be humorous." The contrite look which the son put on passed into a dark stare. "By what you tell me, you are a sentimentalist. Sorry if I wound you." A sign of amused indulgence encouraged him. "You put love on a pedestal; a pretty gesture, but today—is it not a thought démodé?"

"I am afraid you have been unfortunate in your young experiments."

"Not at all," the boy retorted in some pique. "Permit me to assure you—"

"Since you have it yet to learn that true love is never out of fashion."

"I know women too well to take love seriously."

"I am sure you do. But your views will change, once you are loved by a right woman. Till that happens we only waste each other's time with such discussions." Lanyard got up and, as Maurice rose in kind, dropped both hands upon his shoulders. "Good night, my son. It grows late, and we have all this voyage."

"But," the young man objected in a twinkle, "aren't you forgetting something?" "What, for example?" "To make me promise I'll try to be a good boy for your sake."

"That I shall never ask of you."

"What! You don't consider it your duty?" "Man never yet quitted his folly for anybody's sake but his own, and didn't return to it. The day will come when you will fall out of love with the creature of your youth as a devilish fine fellow, thumbing his nose at a pack of stupid police. Till it does—you couldn't make any promise good you might give me."

But at the door Lanyard turned back for a last word.

"Oh, by the by—watch yourself with Fenna Crozier."

"Why?" Maurice was startled and resentful. "What does she know?"

"Much more than you do. She's far cleverer than you. If you value your secrets, pull wide of that young woman."

Lanyard reserved his wink to the ironic gods till in the dusky passageways that led to his own cabin.

Occupational Diseases Conquered by Science

Silicosis, Once Common and Dreaded by Workers, Is Rare Affliction Today

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
 United States senator from New York
 Former Commissioner of Health,
 New York City

WE ARE greatly indebted to the brilliant work of scientists who have wrought about a marked reduction in occupational diseases and accidents.

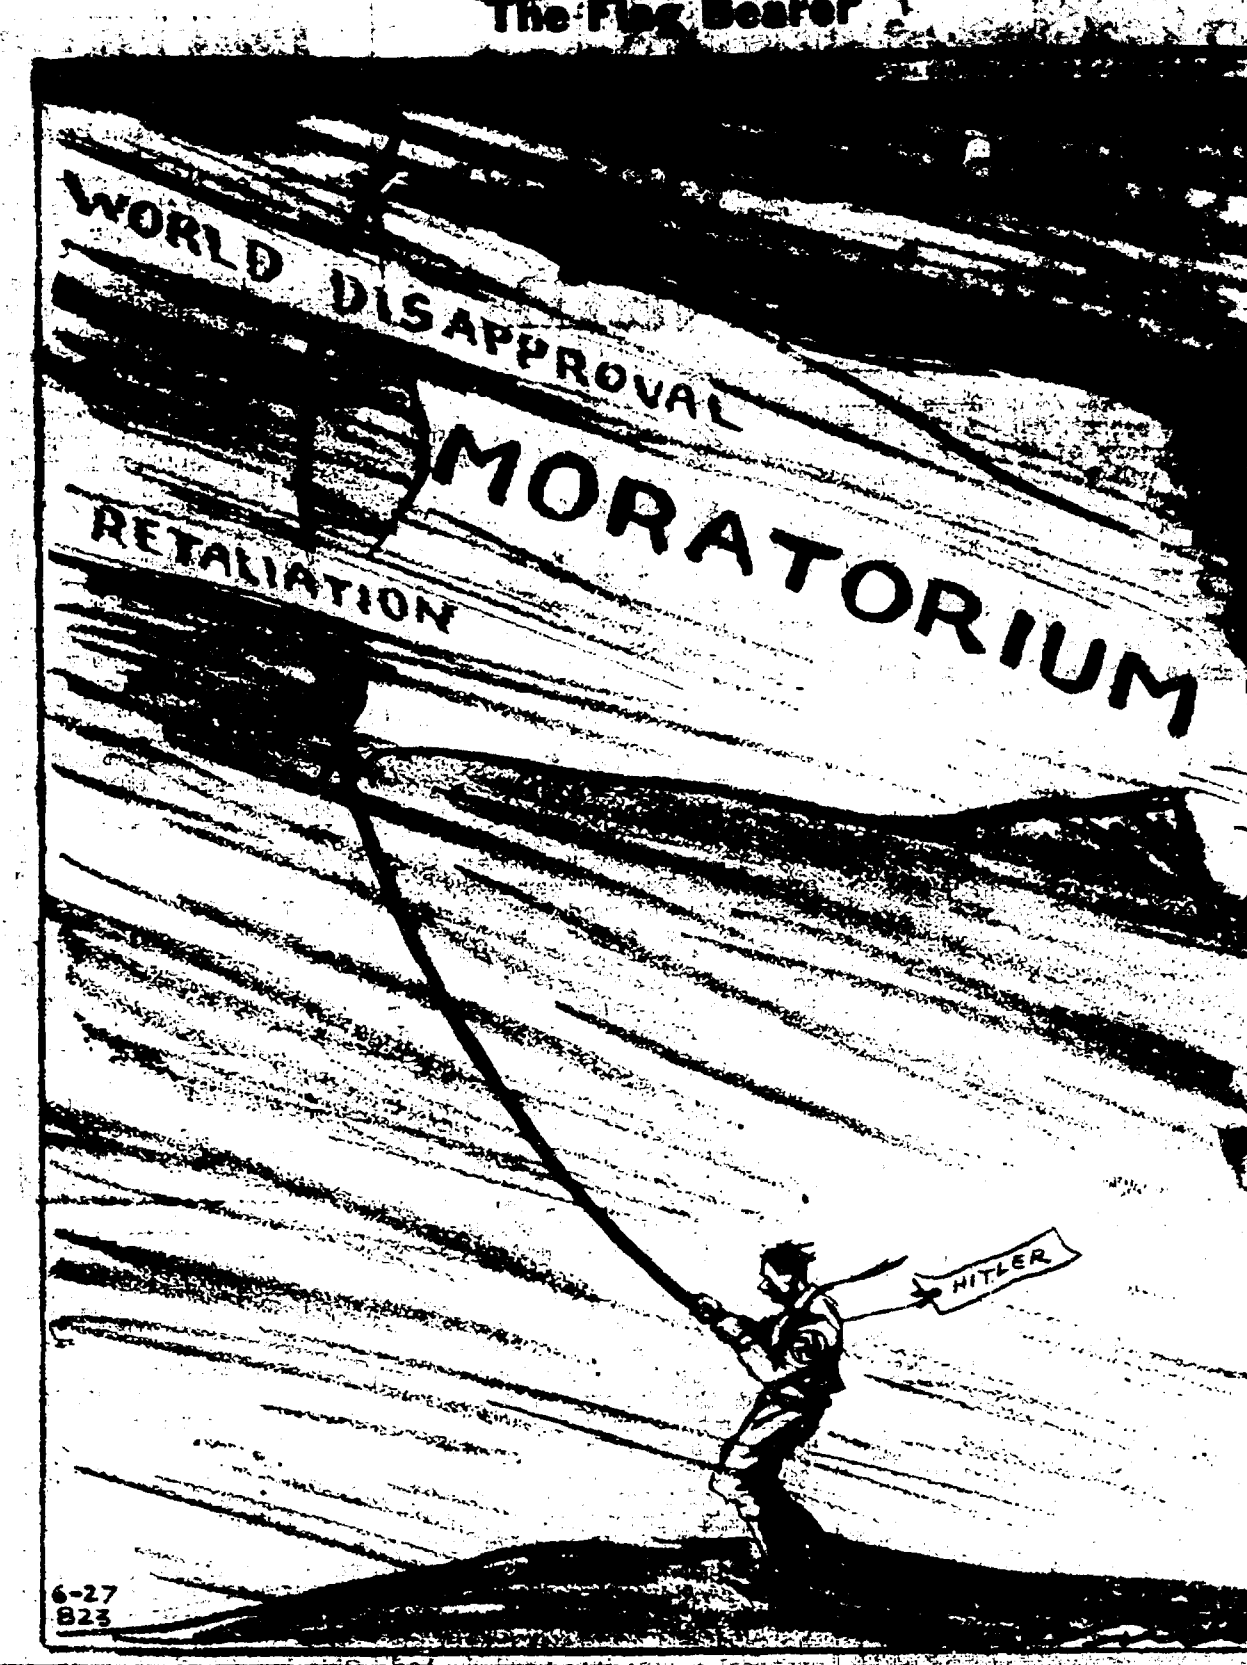

At one time "silicosis" was a common disease of men employed in sand blasting, foundry work, and in the making of castings, sandstone products and glass, as well as in quartz, granite and asbestos mining. Today these occupational diseases are almost unknown.

As a result of undue exposure to silicates, a sand compound, workers became victims of such disturbances of the lungs as "anthracosis," "silicosis," "siderosis," "asbestosis" and "pneumoconiosis." These diseases with terrible names result from exposure to various kinds of dust which the workers inhale. Fundamentally they are identical, and all of them lead to gradual impairment of the health.

Effects the Lungs
 Great harm is done by continually taking silicates or other irritating dust into the lungs. It leads to chronic irritation and ultimately the formation of fibrous tissue and thickening of the lungs. As a result of this change, breathing becomes difficult and the lungs fail to perform their regular function.

If the disease is not recognized at an early stage and the workman is permitted to continue with his work, he becomes more and more susceptible to various infections of the lungs. He may contract pneumonia which in many instances develops into tuberculosis. The heart becomes weakened because of the additional work placed upon it, and within a very short time the individual becomes a chronic invalid.

Fortunately, through better understanding of the means of preven-

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

The versatility and broad power of mimicry of Katharine Hepburn was put to the acid test when the star was called upon to master the difficult idioms and dialect of the Carolina mountain dwellers for her role of Trigger Hicks in her current RKO-Radio picture, "Splitfire," which is now playing at the Cliftona Theatre.

The characterization, according to those who have seen the picture, is radically different from anything this star has heretofore attempted, either for the stage or the screen, calling upon her to be a bewitching hoyden one moment and a battling wildcat the next.

It was at first thought that the Carolina vocabulary would be extremely difficult for Miss Hepburn to learn, since it is the direct antithesis of her flowing, broad "a's" cultivated for the Broadway stage, but the readiness with which she accomplished it was surprising.

AT THE GRAND

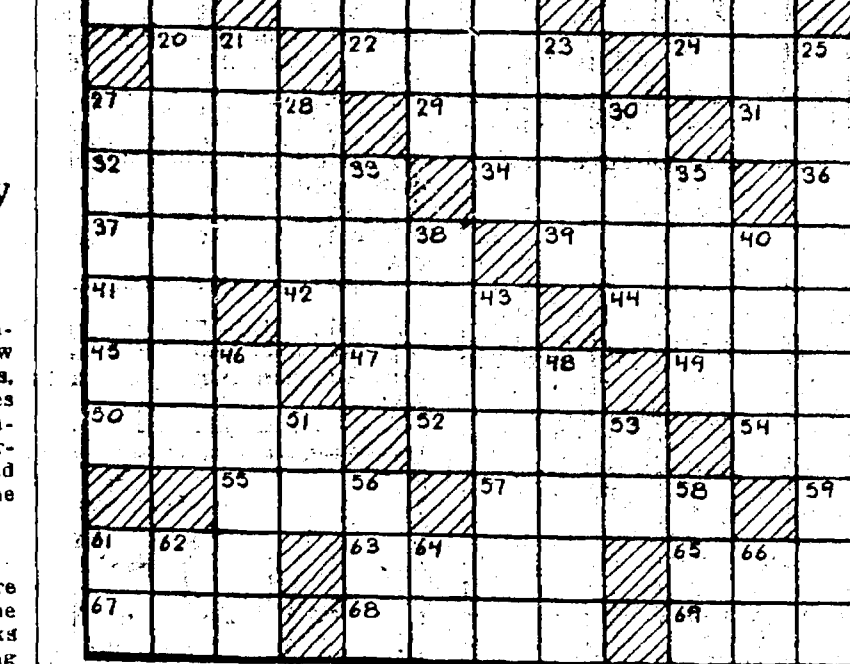

The age-old problem of "the eternal triangle" is presented in a new light in "Glamour," the Universal drama at the Grand. Constance Cummings, Paul Lukas and Phillip Reed play the characters at three points of the love triangle. In Edna Ferber's story, the wife of Paul Lukas, is a theatrical star; and a new romance enters her life when Reed is engaged as her leading man.

Think how many "great" failures fail because they can't make brilliant men to do work.

To become a great benefactor, you must be a good make becoming frocks and ladies.

Nations Find Man Likes to Gamble and Ease Laws

Machines for shuffling lottery numbers.

Waking up to the fact that man likes to gamble, governments of many nations are repealing restrictions on lotteries, horse race betting, wagers on dog races and other forms of gambling which have been regarded as "sinful". In some instances governments even are going so far as to stage their own lotteries to help balance the budget and alleviate taxation. This layout shows some scenes associated with popular forms of gambling, baskets for shuffling lottery tickets, and a steeplechase.

MADMANKILLSONE, HURTS TWO OTHERS

BELLEFONTAINE, June 25.—A madman, armed with a club and a large knife, who ran amuck in a small Logan-co community yesterday, beating one man to death and wounding two other persons, was in Mary Rutan hospital with a self-inflicted wound today.

Victim of the tragedy, which shattered the Sunday quiet of West Mansfield, was Lanson B. Harvey, 76, widely known surveyor. His assistant, a nephew, Roy Harvey, 40, was captured but only after he had wounded another uncle and slashed his own throat with a broad knife.

The nephew, who disappeared a short time after relatives filed a lunacy warrant against him, reappeared yesterday as Mrs. Harvey walked to a barn at the rear of her home. He climbed the woman to the ground with a stake and then ran to the house and beat his uncle to death.

Grabbing a knife, he rushed to the home of another uncle, Edward Harvey, 63, and broke through a hastily erected barricade by smashing in a window. He climbed into the kitchen of the home where he slashed his Uncle Edward with a knife.

His aunt rushed to the home of neighbors who cornered the madman in the kitchen of the home. As a handful of them closed in on the lunatic, he drew the knife across his own throat.

He was rushed to Mary Rutan hospital where Mrs. Harvey and his uncle Edward also are receiving treatment. Sheriff Charles Bowly posted a guard over Roy and said the man, although apparently a lunatic, would be charged with murder if he recovers so that he could be held without gaining freedom under bond.

Lanson Harvey, the victim, was former surveyor of Union-co and assistant surveyor in Hardin and Madison counties. He was widely known throughout this section of the state. Roy, who ran amuck, formerly operated a poolroom in Ada in Hardin-co.

NEED ENERGY?

Here's the latest word from Science on increasing Vim and Energy... quickly!

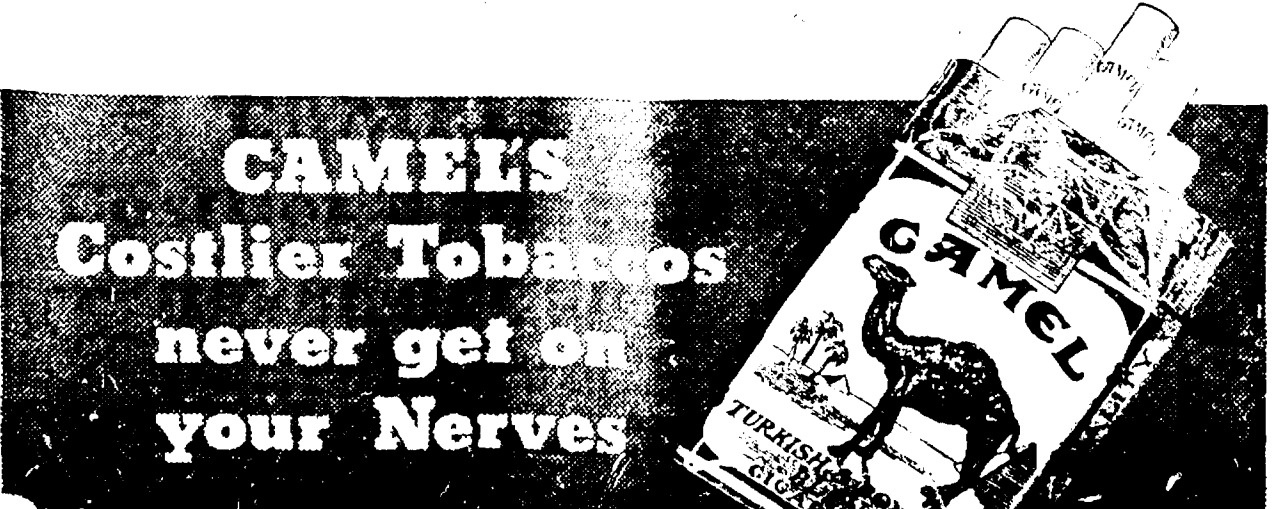

Today we call attention again to important facts which were presented to smokers in a recent item in this paper. Perhaps you overlooked it. We repeat: You can release new vigor, when tired, by smoking a Camel. This comes from the "energizing effect" in research made in the laboratories of science. And so—"get a lift with a Camel!" Any time you want to enjoy yourself or restore yourself. Steady smoking need, not concern Camel smokers, since the finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS in Camels never get on your nerves.

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

"Get a LIFT with a Camel!"
